POLITICAL VS. SOCIAL EQUALITY.

A sufficient number of States have ratified the proposed constitutional amendment to secure its speedy adoption, and the period is near at hand when no man can be debarred from the right of suffrage, in any portion of the Union, on account of race or color.

While the nation is prepared to accept this conclusion as the logical result of a prolonged agitation, the social relations of the various races will continue to be beyond the reach of law, and to be subject only to the affinities and repulsions of individuals.

The old standard Democratic argument against justice to the freedmen was embodied in the stereotyped question, "Do you want your daughter to marry a nigger?" and the changes were rung in a thousand ways on the idea that political equality was necessarily accompanied by social equality, and a complete removal of all barriers of every description together once a year at an election poll.

Nothing is plainer than that the enjoyment of the right of suffrage by all white men has not led to any such results. Though any given body of men may cordially associate together for a specific political purpose, they agree to disagree on all other subjects, and to be totally independent and untrammeled in their social, business, and religious affiliations.

Notwithstanding the clear distinctions between social and political equality, we regret to notice that the efforts to confound them are not exclusively confined to the Democratic party. From time to time attempts are made by ultra friends of the negro, or by ambitious negroes, to bolster up the theory that colored men gain a title to social privileges by virtue of their newly-acquired political rights.

Thousands of white men are continually taboed by circles into which they desire to enter. They may be blackballed by a lodge, denied admission into a church, or excluded from a fashionable "set," for good, bad, or indifferent reasons, founded mainly on the fact that somebody in the association with which they wish to unite objects to their companionship; but after this rejection they do not feel it necessary to complain that it infringes their rights as citizens and voters.

We expect and desire that the ballot will aid the negroes to become more intelligent, more industrious, and more useful men. It will help them, as it has helped the masses of white men, to resist insidious legislation directed against themselves, to promote the education of their children, and to break down artificial barriers to their advancement.

COMMENCEMENT DAY.

The University of Pennsylvania holds its annual commencement to-day, and in all parts of the country the various colleges and universities are celebrating with appropriate ceremonies the event which will send out into the world a new body of trained and educated men to enter into the battle of life, and to carry on the work of civilization and progress.

Henceforth the available portions of the park will no longer be confined to the eastern bank of the Schuylkill. The new extension will at once become a favorite resort for tens of thousands, and as the improvements now in progress are perfected, attraction after attraction and charm after charm will be added to the scene, until Philadelphia obtains the finest park in existence, and the most superb scenic combination of art and nature in the world.

It was fitting that this formal opening of a great popular resort should be accompanied by a graceful tribute to the donor of the valuable estate which constitutes its crowning glory, and Eli K. Price was appropriately selected to present to Jesse George a superbly bound volume containing the official record of his generous donation.

The University of Pennsylvania is an institution that is well worthy of the regard of the citizens of Philadelphia. Our Central High School fills an important position, but its work and that of the University are not identical. That the University has not hitherto taken its proper position among the great colleges of the country is, in a great measure, its own fault; but its deficiencies, whatever they are, cannot be laid upon the shoulders of its present managers, who are exerting themselves to make it a credit to the city and State.

The difficulty which arose in Councils about selling the University a portion of the Almshouse tract was, doubtless, due in a great measure to the fact that the necessities of the institution and its importance were not fully understood. In Europe the colleges and universities are almost all of them subsidized by government, independently of their private endowments, and in this country the least that can be done is for the public to deal liberally with them.

AN amusing illustration of New York bluster is given by the letter of a correspondent of the New York Herald, writing from the favorite Philadelphia watering-place, Cape May. After our citizens have bathed on its delicious beach for years, after they have labored energetically to establish a railway connection, and made large subscriptions to the stock of the splendid new hotel, the Stockton House, the Herald correspondent, amazed at the magnitude of the preparations for a splendid season, and at the manifold evidences of Philadelphia enterprise and energy, coolly claims for Gotham the credit of all that has been done, and vouchsafes the wonderful information that New York enterprise has taken charge of the future of Cape May.

At a special meeting of the Faculty of the JEFFERSON MEDICAL COLLEGE, of Philadelphia, convened in reference to the death of their late associate, CHARLES D. MERRIS, M. D., it was Resolved, That the members of the Faculty have with deep grief sorrowed the demise of their late distinguished colleague, CHARLES D. MERRIS, M. D., Emeritus Professor of Obstetrics, whose name and fame have been so closely associated with the history of the Institution.

Ripe in years and rich in all the honors that can be gathered from the broad field of science and literature, he has closed a long and active life, efficiently and enthusiastically devoted to the best interests of the sick and suffering, and the extension and improvement of medical science.

Warm-hearted, genial, and amiable in his intercourse with his fellow-men, his wit and impetuousness as a teacher and writer, the Faculty of this College, and the profession at large, may well sorrow over the extinction of a life so rich in usefulness and renown.

It is further resolved that the Faculty of the Jefferson Medical College, in respect to his memory, will attend the funeral, and that a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to his family.
